

GHOST GARDEN COMES BACK TO LIFE

We are all familiar with ghost towns, communities that have been abandoned due to the collapse of the local economy. Once these towns have ‘closed up shop’ that’s pretty much the end of the line.

A community garden is not unlike a town, which, when going well, bustles with enthusiasm and excitement. Given that, we might ask ourselves, would it be possible for a community garden to one day be branded with the unfortunate label of “Ghost Garden”?

Picture a community garden of 55 enthusiastic families coming together in May 2009 as everyone plants seeds in anticipation of a bountiful harvest at the recently relocated Aurora Community Garden (ACG). In June, a visit to the garden any day of the week, one would see families watering their seedlings and sharing in casual chit- chat with fellow gardeners.

All seemed to be right on track but not for long. It was in the month of July that things turned sour. In fact, things turned yellow. The leaves on the plants literally turned yellow. The gardeners stopped visiting. By August it was official. The Aurora Community Garden was a ‘Ghost Garden’.

What went wrong? Pools of brown water were spotted in some areas of the garden; not a good sign. Brown water indicated that iron was being carried off by the water. Plant leaves deprived of iron turn yellow.

Not only does poor drainage put plants at risk of iron deficiency, a saturated root zone drowns the roots and makes the soil virtually uninhabitable for vital organisms. We were certainly hard pressed to find worms and other signs of life in the soil.

In an effort to save the garden, we cranked up our soil amendment strategy a notch or two. Despite efforts to tackle the serious drainage problem the next season was nothing to brag about. A few gardeners had success stories in 2010, many did not. Poor drainage was still causing serious problems.

Pole beans touch the sky at the ACG in 2011

If the garden was going to be successful in 2011, two things needed to take place. First, weeping tiles needed to be installed in the low lying areas of the garden to remove excess water from the soil. Second, gardeners needed more time to repair the soil. Instead of limiting the garden season to less than 5 months, gardeners were able to visit their garden anytime throughout the year. This meant gardeners had plenty of time to amend the soil in late fall and again in early spring.

A new season began in May. Our most determined gardeners still came back to fight the good fight. We saw May and June pass and the community garden was looking good. Knowing July was the real test our fingers were crossed. The month passed and the plant leaves stayed green. The community garden made the turn. The ACG, dubbed a ‘ghost garden’ in 2009, struggled to make a comeback, and it did. Not only were gardeners rewarded with a successful harvest this year, the unconventionally warm fall season granted us the opportunity to harvest our vegetables straight through to November. A much deserved reward for our dedicated gardeners.

MESSAGE FROM THE CHAIR

I met a Newmarket resident last week who shared his story with me. He was homeless for seven years and spoke of the many cold nights he spent under the Queen Street bridge fighting to stay warm. Today, he has a place to call his own. Now he is making plans to donate to others in our community who are in need this holiday season.

This man's generosity is humbling. His goodwill sets an example for others to consider how they can share their good fortune. Choose wisely and give freely - there is no shortage of great causes.

In retrospect, the York Region Food Network (YRFN) Board and staff have had a very busy year. Currently we are preparing to re-locate our office and we are close to making a final decision. If anyone has looked for a new home you know how difficult it can be to get as many of the amenities that you regard as "must haves". Unfortunately, moving is also an expensive process and YRFN would greatly appreciate any donations toward our move. Skilled labour and materials are also appreciated so please contact us if this suits your donation budget.

The Board has also undertaken measures to strengthen the organization through the creation of a few new board sub-committees that address policies, human resources, fund-raising and social media. Anyone who has skills in any of these areas, and who would like to volunteer with us, please give us a call. The Board and staff have also welcomed a few new faces to the team and hopefully in the New Year you will see some new designs and information on our website. We are also on Facebook so go ahead and like our York Region Food Network page or follow us on Twitter @yrfoodnetwork.

The future of YRFN has many exciting changes in store. I encourage you to make a donation to help us secure a smooth transition into the New Year and further our vision of Food for health – food for all.

On behalf of the Board and staff,

Seasons Greetings!

Chair

WELCOME BRONWEN!

I'm Bronwen and I'm excited to be working as a Program Coordinator at York Region Food Network. Here, I run the breakfast drop-in, reclamation and community kitchen programs, but I've been doing front line community work for the past 8 years.

I started working in homeless shelters and then moved on to harm reduction outreach work with the Halton Public Health needle exchange program. From there, I became a Street Outreach Worker at Streets to Homes in Toronto, helping homeless people in the downtown core find housing, healthcare and other supports.

Recently, I finished my Master in Environmental Studies degree at York University, in which I studied agriculture and food policy. I got to be completely immersed in the study of food, something I am very passionate about.

I'm looking forward to meeting everyone and promoting good food in York Region.

A friend of ours at the Network office, David Rogers, has released his first book of poetry, The Dark Road. The book, comprised of 40 poems including The Tree, below, eloquently captures the journey Dave has been on through his experiences on the streets and in recovery.

The Tree

The willow tree
It weeps for me
It cries all night
When I am running free.

The Pine tree
It sheds its cones
Waiting for me, to come home

The maple tree
With its sugar so great
Waits for me also
Hoping along the way
I have not met my fate.

The great oak tree
With its great might
Calls out to me
In the middle of the night

Come home little one
You're still welcome here
I can hear it calling to me
In the still air

For there is love in this house
You are wanted here
Just come home little one
Just come home

FOOD FOR CHANGE:

BUILDING A FOOD CHARTER FOR YORK REGION

Food touches all of our lives in a variety of ways, several times each day. On November 9th at the Aurora Cultural Centre a conversation started that we hope will lead to a sustainable and just food system that supports healthy communities. Participants envisioned a food system where local and healthy food is the easy choice, where everyone has dignified access to good food, and we have a food economy that will lead the way to a vibrant, healthy, ecological and equitable community.

A food charter is a tool that links policy and community action. The journey towards a food charter in York Region will not only articulate the vision for our food system, it will engage community to cultivate a healthy food system. At our conversation café, groups discussed the various elements that are included in a charter: health and wellbeing, education, economic development and sustainability, environment and ecological health, equity and social justice, and culture and celebration.

The Food Charter Working Group is planning a follow-up visioning day and community consultations in the first half of 2012. We will begin with a draft food charter based on input gleaned so far and flesh it out as we go. The objective is to have endorsements of the York Region Food Charter from all nine local municipalities and York Region Council. Links to examples of food charters from other jurisdictions across Canada can be found at www.yrfn.ca/foodcharter.
